Professional Pathways Event Series (Y13–Year 1 Uni): A Spring Week alternative focused on finance, private credit, and alternative assets.

Professional Pathways 2026 – Insight Days for Ambitious Students
Are you curious about what it takes to build a career in investment management? Professional Pathways is a unique series of insight days designed to open doors for talented students from state schools. Our mission is simple: to make the most competitive opportunities in finance accessible to everyone.

Over two days in February, you'll step into the heart of the City of London and experience what life looks like inside leading investment firms. You'll hear directly from professionals, take part in practical workshops, and start building the skills and networks that will shape your future. And because we believe opportunity should never be limited by cost, your travel expenses will be covered.

What's in Store

Each day is packed with opportunities to learn and connect. Expect inspiring talks from top-tier funds, interactive case studies, and hands-on sessions designed to boost your confidence and sharpen your skills. You'll join panel discussions, explore "day in the life" insights, and take part in interview workshops that will prepare you for the next step in your journey.

Who Can Apply?

Sixth form students (final year), Gap year students, First-year university students. We particularly welcome applications from students who are state-school educated, first-generation university students, or eligible for free school meals.

How to apply?

Step one: Simply complete the application form sharing with us why you are interested in the events, and what area of finance you are most interested in by the 25th January at 23:59pm.

The Government Social Research Degree Level Apprenticeship

If you're naturally curious about why people behave the way they do or want to understand the "how" and "why" behind social issues, you could be perfect for a career in social research.

Our degree apprenticeship programme offers a fee-free Applied Social Research degree from the University of Kent alongside working in a government department. This scheme allows you to earn whilst you learn. No research experience is necessary, just a desire to learn!

Picture yourself designing surveys that capture what entire populations think, running focus groups that dive deep into people's experiences, or analysing data that reveals otherwise hidden patterns in how society functions. You might be evaluating whether a new policy is helping people find jobs, researching what makes communities feel safer, or investigating why some educational programmes succeed whilst others don't.

Social research helps government make better policy and deliver better services, using data and research to guide government decisions and delivery.

Learn more about Government Social Research, our recruitment schemes, and the benefits of working as a government social researcher.

You must have, or expect to gain, a minimum of 96 UCAS points

Exploring Law: Studying Law at University

Is law right for you? Learn the basics, explore key questions in depth, and hear from students and inspirational legal figures.

Exploring Law: Studying Law at University

Exploring Law: Studying Law at University is an innovative, open-access online course designed primarily for 16 to 18-year-olds who are considering studying law at university in the UK. It is intended to help any student, whatever their background, and whatever their particular university aspirations, decide whether law is the right subject for them.

What can the Exploring Law course offer me?

During the course, you will be introduced to fundamentals of law – its nature, sources and major categories – and explore in depth some fascinating questions of criminal law, public law and private law. You will also gain valuable insights into, and have a chance to practise, key skills that every law student needs. The final module of the course provides useful advice on how to make an effective university application

The course is intended to be a rich and engaging experience. In each module, academic experts from the Faculty of Law will guide you as you work through activities that allow you to learn about, and interact with, the law in different ways. In addition, you will hear first-hand from current university law students about their experiences and from inspirational figures from the world of law, and you will have the opportunity to interact with other learners, sharing your experiences, thoughts and ideas.

How can I access the course?

The Exploring Law course is free to access and complete. It can be accessed via the Exploring Law course page on the FutureLearn online course platform. To take the course, you only need to follow a very simple registration process.

If you opt to enrol on the course for free, you will have full access to the course for six weeks. During that time, the six course modules will become available to you on a weekly basis, and you can work through each module, as it becomes available, at your own pace. Although FutureLearn describes this as "limited access", you will enjoy the full course experience during your free enrolment, and you will be supported throughout that time by our course facilitators.

Enrolment dates: 26 January to 9 March

There are six weekly modules, and to get the most out of the course, students should aim to spend around 4 hours on each module. Find out more here
